

The Swinging Door

Cartoons and local edition production

A presentation for Rick Swider

Barclay: "I pay for financial advice so my second-guessing has professional opposition."

Three familiar voices

Drew notices the absurdity in the system.

Barclay feels it in his wallet.

Abby has the last word.

The matching speaking pose keeps the mouth open and the listeners turned toward the speaker.

Abby: "I'll split the bill. You can divide the credit for predicting the market."

Austin, Texas

Taking Offers

Local housing provides the subject.

The caption, television picture and chalkboard approach the same subject from different angles.

This is an existing selected cartoon. It demonstrates the target visual format.

Barclay: "My Austin house finally got an offer. From my realtor, to lower the price."

Los Angeles, California

The View Is Extra

A different place and a different joke.

The bar, cast and black-and-white treatment remain consistent.

This is an existing selected cartoon. Each new automated request produces its own caption and television picture.

Drew: "In L.A., I'm renting the view. The house costs extra."

Everyday money

Individual Flakes

A familiar purchase supplies the setup. A concrete detail supplies the comic turn.

The reader can enjoy the line without knowing financial jargon or reading a long explanation.

Drew: "The cereal's the same price, but I'm beginning to recognize the individual flakes."

Local life, a light touch

Quiet Arrivals

The humor comes from a recognizable human contradiction.

Warmth matters. The editorial checks screen for partisan attacks, cruelty, weak grammar and recycled punchlines.

Drew: "I'm against airport noise, except when it's bringing my grandchildren."

A simple generation flow

01 Choose

Enter a city, a state and a cartoon count. Generate saves the request before production starts.

02 Research and write

Dated sources guide the subject. The writer and reviewer revise the caption and matching TV and menu ideas.

03 Draw and assemble

The RTX 4090 creates TV art. The compositor preserves the room and matching cast, then adds chalk and dialogue.

04 Review

The bar follows real production stages. Finished images appear automatically with downloads and source records.

The system behind the screen

01 GitHub and Vercel

GitHub holds the website code and selected art. Vercel serves the website and authenticated request endpoints.

02 Supabase

The database retains the queue, job state and receipts. Private storage holds generated images and evidence.

03 The local RTX 4090

A worker polls for due jobs and runs local models. Requests wait while the studio is offline. Completed steps have recovery checkpoints.

04 The longer-term host

A dedicated always-on GPU machine can take over production. It will still need monitoring, storage and recovery testing.

Print size changes the detail

Artwork size	Effective PPI	Use
3.4 x 5.1 inches	301	Fine-detail proof
4 x 6 inches	256	Classic print
5 x 7.5 inches	205	Medium review
6 x 9 inches	171	Large review

The source is 1024 x 1536 pixels. Enlarging the picture does not create new detail.

The website exports exact-size PDFs on Letter or A4. Use Actual size in the print dialog and confirm the publication’s requirements.

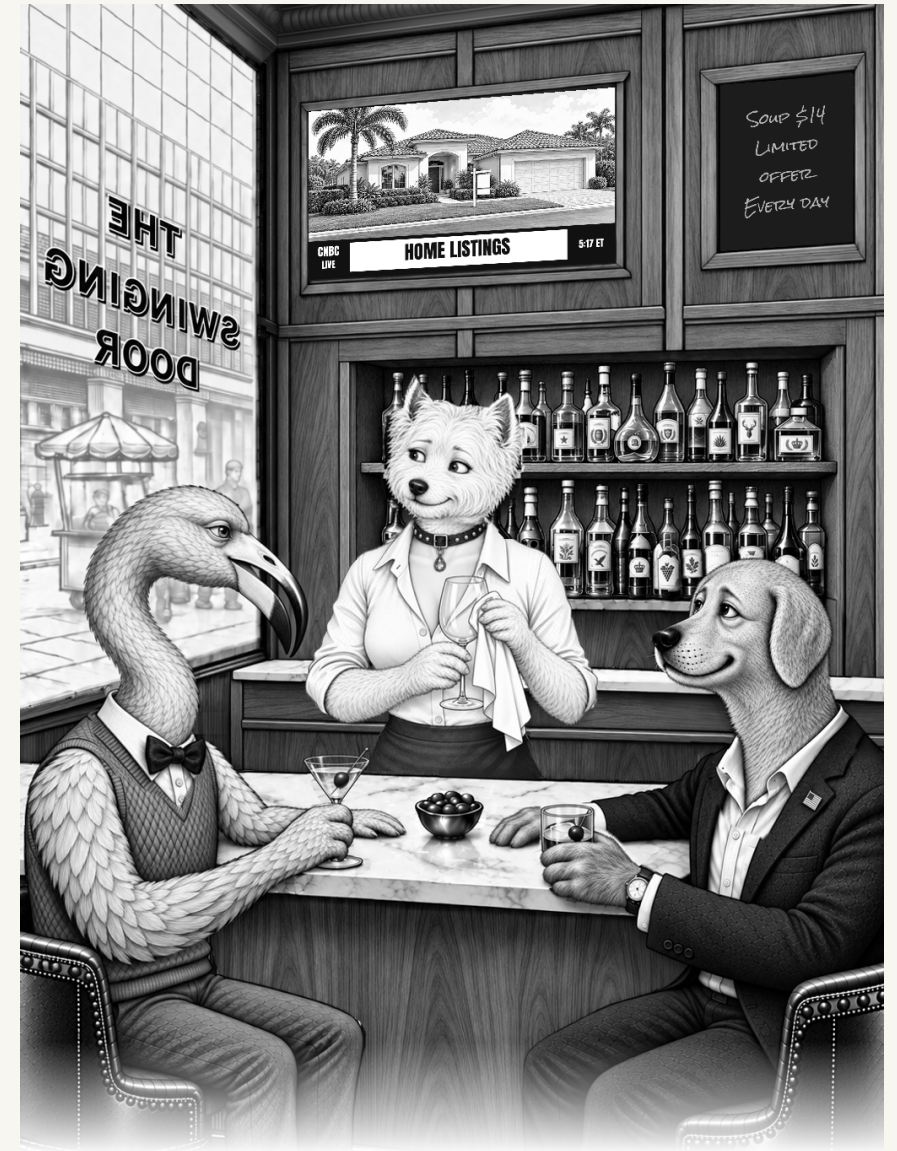

An editor's view

Cartoons, slides and newspaper layouts

The Presentation tab browses all 40 cartoons in full-screen slides.

Choose up to 12 cartoons for a print packet. Compare four artwork sizes or switch on the 11 x 17 inch newspaper layout study.

Every generated edition still needs editorial review before publication.

Drew: "The listing calls it a 'rare opportunity'—there are twelve more on the same street."
