

Drew

The dry observer

Flamingo

Drew sees the mechanism behind the headline. A composed, well-heeled gentleman with a raised eyebrow and a dry sense of humor, he can sum up an expensive absurdity in one sentence. Then he returns to his martini.

Signature details

- A graceful S-shaped neck and finely layered feathers
- Black bow tie and a textured, sleeveless sweater vest
- A martini, one olive, and an unhurried point of view

Barclay

The gentleman paying the bill

Golden retriever

Barclay brings the headline down to the price on his own receipt. Mature, confident and good-humored, he is a successful gentleman who understands money without pretending that everything it buys makes sense. His warmth is as important as his wit.

Signature details

- A warm retriever face, black dog lip line and neatly groomed neck fur
- Dark jacket, open collar and a small American flag lapel pin
- Soft, furry hands and an old fashioned within reach

Abby

The proprietor with the last word

West Highland terrier

The Swinging Door is Abby's bar. Warm, elegant and entirely in command, she hears the gentlemen out while keeping the room running. She is fond of both of them, intimidated by neither, and usually the one who settles the matter.

Signature details

- Bright, welcoming eyes and soft terrier fur
- A fitted blouse and a studded collar with one teardrop pendant
- An empty wine glass and one plain polishing towel